

Heaven In Business – South Jersey

September 15, 2018

This month at our Heaven In Business meeting we reviewed the five tools that we discussed the previous month and how we applied them to opportunities at our workplaces. We brought up other opportunities we have faced over the last month and worked together as a team to apply the tools.

Our teaching this month focused on how to get our MBA at work, but with a whole new meaning. We discussed how to motivate by appreciating at our workplace. We took the 5 love languages: words of affirmation, quality time, acts of service, tangible gifts, and physical touch; and applied them to ourselves, coworkers and superiors at our workplace. We learned that some of our love languages are not the same that they are in our personal life as in our workplace. We also learned practical ways to show each love language at the workplace. We further discussed the importance of learning how to speak each love language to help appreciate those around us. The reason most people leave their workplace is because they do not feel trusted or valued. We defined the difference between recognition and appreciation. Recognition is about improving performance and the good of the company, but appreciation is about what is good for the company and the person. Recognition comes from the top down, appreciation comes from any direction.

We were encouraged to continue to apply the five tools we learned in opportunities we come across at our workplace, but to look even deeper and to find the love language of those we encounter. We were also encouraged to learn how to speak the different love languages at work. We were reminded that anyone can impact their workplace no matter what your position is and that there may be nothing more precious we can give to others at work than value.

Love & God's Blessings,
